3. Unreasonable complaints procedure

- 3.1 On occasion, the actions or behaviours of a service user, associated family member, staff, customer or visitor can take up a disproportionate amount of staff time when there is no realistic possibility of a satisfactory resolution even after following the guidance in points 1 and 2 above.
- 3.2 It is recognised that people may act out of character in times of trouble or distress. There may be upsetting or distressing circumstances leading to any complaint and FFC accepts that being persistent can be positive when pursuing a complaint.
- 3.3 However, the actions of individuals who are angry, demanding or persistent can result in harassment of FFC staff and unreasonable demands. It is these actions that FFC considers unacceptable. These actions can include:
- Aggressive or abusive behaviour (in person, by phone, email or use of social media)
 - Unreasonable demands
 - Unreasonable persistence (resulting in the harassment of groups or individual members of staff)

- 3.4 The manner in which FFC will manage the actions of an unreasonable complainer will depend on the nature and extent of their actions.

If it adversely affects FFC's ability to carry out its work and provide a service to others, we may restrict the complainants contact with us in order to manage the impact of their actions. This could include the restriction of contact in person, by telephone, letter, electronically or through social media sites.

We will advise individuals in advance when their contact is going to be restricted. In extreme cases, it may be necessary to involve the Police to protect staff whom they have a duty of care for.

- 3.5 FFC will endeavour to maintain at least one form of contact. In extreme situations or where the unacceptable nature/frequency of contact (through any medium) persists, FFC will consider legal action against them. This could include but is not limited to injunction proceedings on the basis that an individual is directly affecting FFC in undertaking its wider service delivery.
